

Carol King

Introduction & Expertise

Carol is an energetic and creative learning and development consultant - a real people person and her passion is for developing people and helping them to achieve their full potential.

An experienced consultant and facilitator, Carol has specialises in management and leadership development; behavioural and team change and has a wealth of experience coaching, facilitating, designing and delivering bespoke training which supports individuals and teams to achieve business and personal success and maximise performance.

Her creativity and ideas can be relied upon to add a new perspective and help bring unique solutions to clients. A professionally qualified trainer, coach and NLP practitioner, Carol is equally comfortable providing one to one experiential learning to individuals or group events to larger teams.

Experience

Carol's commercial experience includes heading up Learning and Development teams for major Accountancy and Legal practices where she was responsible for all aspects of people development. These responsibilities ranged from onboarding programmes, to senior development and coaching.

Her design and implementation of talent management and graduate development programmes resulted in a significant contribution to various awards including inclusion in the Sunday Times Best Companies to work for list and being recognised as an Investor in People Champion.

Working recently in the public sector, Carol has led the successful design and implementation of leadership and coaching programmes – helping to maximise people performance and development in a busy health service.
